Subject: The Feasibility Study for Afforestation
Project in Brunei
(Interim Report on Field Survey by the
Team of Japan International Cooperation Agency).

Dear Haji Mahari,

We would like to present to you the summarized interim results of our feasibility survey for the afforestation project in Brunei.

Our team is the follow-up of the pre-feasibility survey team which was conducted last March and April.

The terms of reference of this team were to make more detailed design around the experimental plantation area where was proposed by Brunei Government.

The actual field works were to study on soil conditions, design of nursery, survey for road and path network, estimation of cost and benefit of the plantation project.

After we went back to Japan, the final conclusion will be summarized in form of the programme of trial plantation.

3. Results of the observations

The observation of the experimental plantation trials in Brunei are as follows:-

(1) Soil and Vegetation Survey

This team have surveyed about 16 plots in the forest of Belait District and Tutong District.

1) The results of soil survey are summarized as follows:-

- A. The soils of Lamunin Area are most suitable for tree planting, because of good aeration and penetrability of tree roots depending on deepness of sandy texture and migration of weathering sandstone.
- B. The soils in Andulau F.R. are assumed high productivity in accordance of deep sandy horizons.
- C. The soils of plantation site in Sungai Liang are typical Acrisols (orthic Acrisol), of which A-horizon are sandy and B-horizon somewhat clay. However this site is able to plant fast growing species. The soil condition on upper site lower site of these hills are somewhat different, so it should be collected the different species on each other site.
- D. Near the southern part of Andulau F.R. the "Kerangas" soils are distributed on large areas. This soils are most dystrophic. But the site is flat and covered with very sandy soils, so it is easy to try the mechanical plantation.

2) The results of vegetation survey are as follows:-

- A. There are Mempisang, Rengas, Kelt, Resak, Seraya and etc. in dominant tree layer (about 30-40 m in height) in survey area, Andulau F.R.
  - B. There are Rengas, Ubah, Nyatoh, Keruing buah bulat, Pusat, Selangan and etc, in dominant tree layer (about 30 m in height) in the proposed reforestation area. There are small trees and glasses on Shifting-Cultivation area in the proposed reforestation area.
  - C. Agathis alba (5-years-old) in line planting area is from 21cm to 222cm in height.
  - D. Pinus caribaea (12-years-old) is about 15cm in DBH on one site and about 20cm on another site in Sungai Liang area.
- (2) The road networks in plantation area are surveyed by the compass and aerial photographs. The results are in Map 1.2.

4. Conclusion

(1) Reforestation area

We selected the forest areas of approximately 100 ha (A site) out Andulau F.R., and approximately 10 ha (B site) along Labi Road for the first period 5 years of experimental plantation.

Then, in the second period (6-10th years), we will select the plantation area of approximately 1,000 ha forests in each eastside of A and B site.

The reasons why we selected in A and B site are as follows:-

- 1) The soil of these sites are suitable for the plantation of fast-growing species.
- 2) A site is located near the silviculture office and the forest research institute which is now constructing.
- 3) These site are undulating or flat, so it is easy to construct the forest road and it will be possible to plant by machines.
- 4) It is easy to land-prepare because of Shifting-Cultivation area and secondary forest.
- 5) It is easy to employ labourer for the plantation because there are small villages near these sites.

(2) Nursery

We would like to settle the 2 ha nursery as Map 3.4.

(3) Plan of trial plantation.

At first, we have to construct the nursery and forest road. Then, we try the 110 ha plantation during five years and we would like to select the suitable species and best silvicultural methods for plantation.

We try 1000 ha trial plantation from the 6th to 10th years and test the following species and trials.

1) Species

A. Fast-growing species

- (a) Pinus caribaea
- (b) Acacia mangium
- (c) Albizia falcutaria
- (d) Meosopsis sp.

- (e) Acacia anlicariformis
- (f) Araucaria hustenii
- (g) Araucaria cunninghamia
- B. Indigenous species
  - (a) Gelongan
  - (b) Anthocephalus cadamba
  - (c) Octomeles sp.
  - (d) Campomsperma sp.

2) Trials

- A. Species elimination test (including nursery test)
- B. Land preparation test
- C. Reforestation method
- D. Natural regeneration
- E. Line planting
- F. Agroforestry
- G. Coverplanting and fertilization

Finally, we greatly appreciate the kind help and cooperation given to us by the Government of Brunei during our study trip.

We sincerely hope that trial plantation project will have a remarkable progress by the result of our team with your kind help.

Respectfully yours,

Keizo Asai
