

It should be noted that a large portion of "other" cases are found in the social infrastructures sector. This is because a number of "Basic Studies" and "Other Studies" concerned with mapping and resource survey belong to this sector.

Total number of Group B studies is 518 and 56.0% of them, 290 studies, are classified into "Completed or In Progress." To recognize a transition of present status more dynamically, this study focused on the relation between the years passed after the study completion and realization rate. On the basis of past follow-up studies since FY 1989, table 3-1 and figure 3-1 show the result in social development sectors.

Figure 3-j Years passed after study and utilization rate
(Group B in social development sectors)

Note: The fiscal year of completion is defined as "0 Year." A hyperbolic curve, which passes through the origin, is assumed to approximate the true relation between the Two variables. The non - linear model was transformed to a strait - line (linear) relation by taking inverse of each of the two variables, and OLS (Ordinary Least Squares) estimation was conducted. No weight is attached to the number of projects.

In social development sectors, a regression analysis on these figures provides a regression value and a curve in table 3-j. This result shows that the utilization rate gradually increases after the completion of the study. The trend is contrary to that of the Group A Studies. This is related to the classification method of Group B studies. It implies that it is not until any specific steps are taken to realize the study results that the study is classified into "Completed or In Progress". In another word, Group B studies are realized by the plus points system, while Group B studies are utilized by the plus points system.

Table 3-k shows the years passed after the completion of the study and realization rate in agriculture, forestry and fisheries sectors. Because of the limited number of the studies in the sector, no regression analysis was conducted. However, there clearly is a trend that the realization rate is the highest in 5-8 years after the completion of the study.

Table 3-1 shows the realization rate by the type of study. The rates are almost 55% in M/P+F/S and F/S. The rate in D/D is 71.4%, which is the highest among all categories. Following two are plausible reasons for the high realization rate in D/D. One is a limited number of D/D. The other is that the feasibility of the projects which are in the stage of D/D has been already confirmed.

Table 3-m shows the realization rate by region. The rate is the highest in ASEAN six countries. It is 63.8%. These rates are low in Middle & South America and Oceania. The former is 43.4% and the latter is 25%. There seem to be some reasons for the high realization rate in ASEAN six countries. High rate of economic growth, a large number of development studies conducted and a large allocation of ODA from Japan are the key reasons. On the contrary, a price reduction of primary products, a burden of accumulated debt, and political instability might have resulted in the low rate in Middle & South America. However, recent economic recovery may cause to raise the rate. In Oceania, it is difficult to generalize the reason for the low rate due to a limited number of studies.

Table 3-n shows the realization rate by sector. Within the sectors which have more than 10 studies, some sectors such as public works, road, and telecommunication- broadcasting show the realization rates higher than 60%.

Especially, the rate in telecommunication- broadcasting sector reaches the highest of 70%.

4. Details of the the Studies classified as "Completed or In progress"

This section examines details of the current status of 290 studies that have been classified as "Completed or In Progress" among the total of 518 Group B Studies. First of all, most of the studies classified in the status of "Completed or In Progress" are ascertained of their procurement of fund for project implementation. Once the procurement of fund is ascertained through various channels such as OECF loans and other loans from development banks and grant aids from JICA and other donors, the projects are normally expected to progress smoothly to the subsequent stages of "Processing", "Implementing", "Partially Completed", and "Completed" in sequence. Though only exceptionally, there are some projects that are classified in the status of "Completed or In Progress" but do not have their procurement of fund confirmed. These projects are ascertained of high possibility of realization for some reason. For example, after the completion of the survey of the "Agricultural Water Development Project on Chantaburi River Basin" in Thailand, detailed design was conducted and the proposed projects were incorporated into the 7th National Plan. After an environmental assessment is conducted this year (FY 1993), construction is planned to start with domestic-fund of 1.72 million bahts.

The above is a general description of the projects in status of "Completed or In Progress". In general those projects which are ascertained of procurement of funds are to be classified in this status.

Although the status of "Completed or In Progress" used to be further divided into three sub-status of "Completed", "Implementing" and "Processing", another sub-status called "Partially Completed" was added this year. That is, those projects which have been implemented and completed only partially but used to be classified into either "Completed" or "Implementing" before are now classified into this new category to conform better with their actual situation. In line with this new classification, 57 studies have been modified their present status of proposed projects and come to fall into the status of "Partially Completed". Taken a close look at, it is observed that the relevant projects in status of "Partially Completed" are those composed of multiple stages or a package of various individual projects. Typical examples are given below.

[E.g. 1] In the "Lower-Moshi Agricultural Development Projects" in Tanzania, the implementation of the proposed projects was planned to consist of several agricultural development projects in different areas. Later on the project for River Rau scheme, the first priority area, was carried out with OECF loan. The second priority was given to Miwaleni Scheme, and the local government made a request for a Japanese grant aid to the Japanese Embassy. However the project has not been carried out, and there is still no activity regarding the area of the third and fourth priority.

[E.g.2] The "Sewerage and Drainage System Project" in Malaysia was proposed as composed of five stages, namely Phase I through Phase V. The construction of phase I was completed in 1985 with domestic fund from the federal government. However the implementation of phase II-V was terminated due to the difficulty in acquiring the large amount of investment fund required.

The above studies are thus classified as "Partially Completed". The results of the examination of the studies in the status of "Completed or In Progress" are summarized as follows.

1) Realization rate

The number of the studies in the status of "Completed or In Progress" as the percentage of the total number of the projects in Group B studies is called as "Realization rate". As a result of the FY1993 Follow-up Study, 290 out of 518 Group B studies have turned out to be in the status of "Completed or In Progress", giving a realization rate of 56.0%. There has been a rise of 1.9% from 54.1% in FY1992.

2) Major types of funding

With regard to types of funding, it is found that the OECF loan is the most important source of fund as expected. However there is an tendency towards more use of domestic fund and grant aid.

3) With regard to region and/or sector, the following specific characteristics are observed.

I. Asian countries, six countries in ASEAN in particular, have received the largest portion of Japanese financial cooperation both in terms of the amount invested and the number of projects. These countries have carried out large scale projects in such sectors as transportation (road, port, railway and air transportation & airport), social infrastructures (water resource development, river & erosion control), communication & broadcasting with OECF loans. However total amount of loans received varies across countries.

II. In Africa, small scale projects in agriculture, forestry and fisheries sectors, particularly in agriculture sub-sectors such as irrigation have been implemented mostly with Japanese grant aid.

III. In Central and South America, due to the debt crisis in the 80s, there was an interruption to the inflow of foreign funds. Hence a lot of projects ranged over all sectors have been delayed.

IV. In Near Middle-East, projects have been implemented mainly by domestic funding from the income of petroleum sales.

In order to facilitate the implementation of the proposed projects, it is crucial that the projects are conformed to the development objective and policies of the country and receive high priority among alternative development programs/projects. It is most desirable that each development study propose projects with appropriate scale and design during the stage of the survey and a prompt step toward implementation be taken after the survey is completed. (This is especially important that this step takes place within two years after the completion of the survey.)
