Estimation

Unit Cost for WWTPs, Sewer Improvement and Improvement of Water Supply Pipes

Annex C.3.1 Procedure of Estimating Unit Construction Cost for WWTP, Sewer Network and Water Supply Network

I. Costs for Construction of WWTP

I.1 New WWTP's

The costs for new WWTP's with nitrogen and phosphorus elimination were estimated on the base of People Equivalent (PE) and the unit costs (in Euro per PE) for the different sizes of the towns and the settlements.

The unit costs were calculated on the base of the information from the Financial Memorandums for WWTP, financed by ISPA and PHARE Programs for different WWTPs and the resources for some plants, financed by EMEPA and State Budget of Bulgaria. The unit costs were corrected according to the inflation for the relevant periods of time.

The data from some Technical Designs and Feasibility Studies were used for dividing the costs to different kind of works in percents (non-constructive, civil, mechanical, electrical and SCADA works).

I.2 Renovation of the Existing WWTPs

The costs for renovation of the existing WWTPs with nitrogen and phosphorus elimination were estimated on the basis of People Equivalent (PE) of towns and settlements and different percents of the relevant unit costs (depending of the condition of the facilities, mechanical and electrical equipment, necessity of enlargement for N and P elimination and other conditions). The division of the costs to different kind of works was made in accordance of the state of the civil works and mechanical and electrical equipment.

II. Cost for Construction of Sewer Networks

The costs for new and improvement of the existing Sewer Networks were estimated on the basis of required length per PE of different sizes of towns and settlements and unit costs (in Euro per m')

The costs for Sewer networks were calculated on the basis of;

- required length (m/PE),
- real costs for fully construction of m' of different diameters of pipes at average depth (including manholes according to the Bulgarian norms and house connections via 20 m)
- percent of division of the diameters according to the sizes of the towns and the settlements

Then the unit costs (Euro/m') for construction of networks for different sizes of settlements were calculated.

III. Cost for Construction of Water Supply Networks

The costs for water supply networks were calculated on the basis of:

- the required length (m/PE),
- real costs for fully construction of m' of different diameters of pipes at average depth (including house connections)
- percentage division of diameters according to sizes of towns and settlements

Then the unit costs (Euro/m') for construction of networks for different sizes of towns and settlements were calculated.

IV. Treatment Methods

For municipal wastewaters, mechanical and biological processes with N and P elimination, disinfection and sludge stabilization are proposed.

A pumping station (if it is necessary) for the raw waste waters for all flow diagrams is foreseen.

A facility for internal sludge and wastewaters is proposed.

IV.1 Conventional activated Sludge Process with anaerobic sludge stabilization

(1) The mechanical stage consists of screens, grit and grease removal and primary sedimentation. The biological stage consists of an aeration tank with nitrification and denitrification and the necessary number of secondary sedimentation tanks. The treated water is disinfected before discharging. Proper coagulant is added for P elimination

The primary and the excess activated sludge are thickened and they are stabilized in anaerobic conditions (heated digesters). Storage for gas and facilities for its utilization are proposed. The stabilized sludge is thickened and dewatered with proper equipment. Dried sludge goes to the sludge storage.

Sludge liquor is collected in a reservoir and is dosed to the biological treatment during the night time.

- (2) The same mechanical and biological treatment of the wastewater is proposed but the anaerobic sludge treatment is in the open digesters and there are no gas facilities.

IV.2 Conventional Activated Sludge Process with Aerobic Sludge Stabilization

The mechanical stage consists of screens, grit and grease removal. The biological stage consists of an aeration tank with nitrification and denitrification and the necessary number of secondary sedimentation tanks. The treated water is disinfected before discharging. Proper coagulant is added for P elimination.

The excess activated sludge is thickened and it is stabilized in aerobic conditions. The stabilized sludge is thickened and dewatered with proper equipment. Dried sludge goes to the sludge storage.

Sludge liquor is collected in a reservoir and is dosed to the biological treatment during the night-time.

IV.3 Extended Aeration Process

The mechanical stage consists of screens, grit and grease removal. The biological stage consists of an aeration tank with nitrification and denitrification and the necessary number of secondary sedimentation tanks. The treated water is disinfected before discharging. Proper coagulant is added for P elimination

The stabilized sludge is thickened and dewatered with proper equipment. Dried sludge goes to the sludge storage.

Sludge liquor is collected in a reservoir and is dosed to the biological treatment during the night time.

IV.4 Sequent Batch Reactors

The mechanical stage consists of screens, grit and grease removal. The biological stage consists of Sequent Batch Reactors (SBR) where nitrification, denitrification and sedimentation are taking place. The treated water is disinfected before discharging. Proper coagulant is added into the SBR for P elimination.

The stabilized sludge is thickened and storage in the reservoir and is dried on the drying beds.

IV.5 Extended aeration process – Oxidation ditch

This process is proposed for the small settlements, and consist of a mechanical stage and oxidation ditches. Biological treatment is without denitrification and P elimination. If there are requirements for N and P elimination, some additional facilities should be constructed.

Storage for the sludge and drying beds are necessary or the sludge should be transported to another WWTP for a further treatment.
